Montréal, June 11, 2018 – Today, Equitas, Canada’s oldest and most active human rights education organization, kicks off its 39th annual International Human Rights Training Program (IHRTP). Ninety-five (95) human rights leaders from fifty-two (52) countries around the world have gathered in Montreal to participate in the IHRTP where they will learn new skills to become more effective in their work. This year, the training welcomes participants from Myanmar, Ukraine, Palestine, Jordan, Rwanda, the Philippines, etc., working on issues such as women’s rights, refugee rights, LGBTQI+ rights, rights for persons living with disabilities, indigenous rights and more. Keynote plenaries and participatory workshops will highlight human rights education practices addressing today’s most pressing challenges worldwide. Some of this year’s sessions revolve around the role of human rights education in the process of social change, global spheres of influence and social change at the community level.

Quotes

“For the past 39 years, Equitas’ International Human Rights Training Program has helped to create one of the largest international networks of human rights leaders. Over 3,700 human rights defenders have been trained here in Montreal and the program continues to attract global change makers every year as it is the only training of its specifically designed for human rights educators.” – Ian Hamilton, Equitas Executive Director

“Now more than ever, there is a need for an inclusive approach to human rights so that they may thrive around the world. Equitas’ International Human Rights Training Program is one of the tools developed in Quebec that shines internationally. Equality, understanding and respect are at the heart of the innovative format that allows its participants from fifty-two countries to actually experience human rights education processes. A practical application is prioritized, as change comes first and foremost from citizens who defend their own rights and freedoms in their countries.” – Julie Miville-Dechêne, Envoy for Human Rights and Freedoms, Quebec Government
