TD Bank Group and Equitas – New Funding Agreement and Event for International Women’s Day with UN Human Rights Expert Rita Izsák-Ndiaye

Toronto, February 27, 2019 – Equitas, Canada's most recognized and most active human rights education organization, is happy to announce that TD Bank Group, through The Ready Commitment, will be funding human rights education programs for hundreds of thousands of children across Canada for the next 3 years. The Ready Commitment, a multi-year program to help individuals and communities prosper, will provide Equitas with $525 000 over 3 years to support children’s participation in activities that build their sense of awareness and understanding of diversity and inclusion and enable them to initiate actions to promote belonging in their communities. The multi-year funding also supports public events that engage individuals from the public, private, and community sector in dialogue about connected, equitable, inclusive communities such as the upcoming Cocktail & Conversation for International Women’s Day with Rita Izsák-Ndiaye, former United Nations Special Rapporteur on Minority Rights, moderated by CTV’s Lloyd Robertson.

TD and Equitas - A Long-Standing Partnership

In partnership with TD since 2006, Equitas offers programming in 52 communities across Canada that focuses on working with organizations that support the active participation of children who are experiencing exclusion, isolation, and barriers to belonging in their community.

As part of The Ready Commitment, TD will target $1 billion in total by 2030 towards community giving in four areas critical to building an inclusive tomorrow – Financial Security, a more Vibrant Planet, Connected Communities and Better Health. Thanks to TD’s remarkable support in the Connected Communities driver of The Ready Commitment, Equitas will continue to work in partnership with more than 500 organizations, including community-based organizations, schools, and municipalities to offer training and coaching for staff working to build their capacity and provide opportunities for children’s leadership. Running for more than 12 years, Equitas’ Play it Fair! program is an innovative initiative for children aged 6-12 years old that reinforces understanding of human rights and equips them with knowledge and skills to promote inclusion and respect for diversity in their communities.

Cocktail & Conversation – A Woman’s Journey for Human Rights

This sold out event to be held at the TD Centre on March 6, Building Connected Communities - A Woman’s Journey for Human Rights, invites Torontonians to meet Rita Izsák-Ndiaye, United Nations independent expert in human rights and share lessons learned on building more equitable and inclusive communities. Timed to coincide with International Women’s Day, the annual event brings together over 100 individuals from the Toronto private, public and community sectors for an inspiring discussion on gender equality and human rights and highlights the contributions of remarkable women human rights defenders.

The conversation will be moderated by Lloyd Robertson, Host and Chief Correspondent for CTV's investigative news series, W5 and former Chief Anchor and Senior Editor of the country's most-watched national newscast, CTV National News with Lloyd Robertson.

The Equitas Cocktail & Conversation in Toronto is an opportunity to raise awareness about human rights education and funds for the cause of human rights. In addition to lead sponsor TD, other sponsors include Xerox, Nokia, Telesat, Fortigo Freight and Simon Fraser University. All proceeds from the event go to support human rights education. Meet Rita Izsák-Ndiaye

Rita Izsák-Ndiaye, a human rights expert from Hungary, currently based in Senegal, has worked with civil society and multilateral organizations in various countries, including in Somalia and Bosnia & Herzegovina, as well as with the Government of Hungary, in the fields of discrimination, racism, minority rights, social inclusion and on other related issues. She was the United Nations Special Rapporteur on Minority Rights from 2011-2017 and is currently the Rapporteur of the United Nations Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. Rita was inspired by her own experiences of prejudice and discrimination to work on human and minority rights. Her father's family was forcibly moved under post-war population transfers from Czechoslovakia (present day Slovakia) to Hungary due to their Hungarian ethnicity in 1947 and her mother is of Romani origin.

Rita holds a Masters in Law from the Péter Pázmány Catholic University in Budapest and participated in Equitas' International Human Rights Training Program (IHRTP) in 2003. The IHRTP alumni network is one of the largest global communities of human rights defenders. To see a sneak preview of Rita Izsák-Ndiaye's thoughts on human rights education, see this short Equitas video on the 70th anniversary of the Universal Declaration on Human Rights.

Quotes

“At TD, we are proud to be working with Equitas to enable 100,000 diverse children this year to participate in activities that create meaningful connections and cultivate their sense of belonging as they become leaders promoting inclusion and respect for diversity with their peers, their families, and members of their community. This program is a great example of what we want to achieve through The Ready Commitment, our global corporate citizenship platform. Together we are opening doors to a more inclusive tomorrow.” – Valérie Picher, Associate Vice-President, Community Relations, TD Bank Group

“It is more important than ever to take a stand for equality and human rights. Thanks to the support of The Ready Commitment, Equitas is able to convene these important conversations about respect for diversity and inclusion. Our guest, Rita Izsak-Ndiaye has a wealth of international experience and insight to share which will help to mobilize Canadians and stimulate further reflection on how we can build stronger and more resilient connections between the diverse communities, both in Toronto and across Canada.” – Ian Hamilton, Executive Director, Equitas
